Weekly Question

Why do dandelions turn white and fluffy?

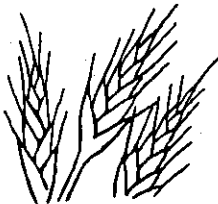

Dandelion seeds have special parts that allow them to be distributed by the wind. Because most seeds float, seeds can also be distributed by water. Rivers, streams, and ocean waves carry some seeds great distances.

Animals also help distribute seeds by eating them. The seed coats keep the seeds from being digested, so they pass through the animal.

Read about each kind of seed. Then write whether you think it is distributed by wind, water, or animals.

1. A coconut is the giant seed of a coconut tree. Coconuts are covered by a very hard shell, and they float.

2. Barley is a plant that is similar to wheat. Its seeds have hooks that can cling to fur or clothing.

3. Fruit from a blackberry plant has many tiny, hard seeds. The fruit is sweet when it is ripe. The fruit is heavy and will not scatter in the wind.

4. Milkweed seeds grow in pods. They develop fluffy parachutes, similar to dandelions. The seeds are very light.

Weekly Question

Why do dandelions turn white and fluffy?

All seeds are covered by a seed coat. The seed coat protects the living part of the seed, called the seed germ, until it is time to grow. Seed coats protect seeds in many ways. For example, they are light and help seeds float on water. Seed coats are also hard, which protects the seed from being damaged. And some seed coats keep seeds from becoming too dry.

Vocabulary

seed coat
the outer part of a seed that is hard and protects the rest of the seed

seed germ
the part of a seed that grows into a new plant

A. Write true or false.

1. Seed coats only protect seed germs from water. _____
2. A seed germ without a seed coat would be easily damaged. _____
3. A seed coat grows into a new plant. _____
4. Seed coats keep plants from growing. _____
5. The seed germ is the part of the seed that is alive. _____

B. Suppose a dandelion seed lands on dry soil. How could the seed coat help protect the seed until rain falls?
